LITERARY NOTES.

-A bookseller once wrote to Voltaire :- " I have just received for publication a number of scandalous anecdotes about you, however, I shall be happy to suppress them if you will send me the trifle of 100 louis d'or," Voltaire replied: "I feel greatly obliged for your extraordinary delicacy, but I have here a small collection of still more scandalous and unknown anecdotes about myself which I am prepared to let you have for fifty louis even if I lose by it,

-The last joke of Sydney Smith, of facetious memory, uttered when he was on his death-bed, was suggested by this subject. Some one had swallowed a bottle of ink, and was afraid that it would poison him. "Let him swallow a quire of blotting-paper," said the wit, "and it will absorb the an amusing story about his book, "The Lady of the Aroostook." After the novel was published he received a letter from an old salt in which the novelist was informed that if he allowed the "Aroostook" to go to sea in the rig he had given her, she would lost before she had cleared the harbor. Mr. Howells recognized the truth of this frank nautical criticism and in the next edition the vessel sailed forth in proper rig.

-Fontenelle, famed for his universality, lived a century, and when ask ed at the close of his long and brilliant career if he felt pain, replied, "I only feel the difficulty of existing." As he was nearing his hundredth year, a friend who was ninety said to him: "Death, I think, has forgotton us. Hush! said Fontenelle, putting his finger to his lips; "He may overhear

-One of the best-known of all Longfellow's poems is "Excelsior." The word happened to catch his eye late one autumn evening, in 1841, in a torn piece of newspaper, and straightway his imagination took fire at it. Taking the first piece of paper hand, which happened to be the back of a letter received that night from Charles Sumner, Longfellow crowded it with verses.

-Rev. T. Starr King, the eloquent clergyman, was in the habit of dictating his sermons. Sometimes, when in the mood of composition, he would dictate sermon after sermon for several days in succession. FOUND IN THE JUNK SHOPS.

Interesting Correspondence Rescued-Old Books and Magazines-Tin Cans. A great many queer and ancient things find their way into the junk shops, just as valuable tableware often finds its way into the ash barrel of othe best regulated family. In a Canal street establishment the other day the writer was shown a portion of an ancient silver service, several of the pieces of which were pounded almost out of shape; the metal resembled old pewter, but it was the solid silver. It had been picked out from a pile of old metal. In the paper sorters' room autographs, photographs, old newspapers, letters, etc., form no small portion of the pickings. Remarkable stories are told of lucky finds in refuse heaps by junk dealers had seen younger years, entered a and their employes, and at the papermills. It is said that the papers relating to the secret correspondence between Jerome Bonaparte and Miss Patterson, of Baltimore, and the subsequent negotiations between the Bonaparte and Patterson families, were found in the waste paper of the old warehouse of the bride's father. In this way the entire "Yes-something, you know, that- history of this interesting affair was made public, and formed the subject of

Not long since, indorsed checks to the amount of $15,000 were found among the waste paper of a Boston bank. The writer has in his possession a Richmond -Mr Howell is reported as telling (Va.) newspaper (The Whig), a copy of the last one issued incident to the surrender of that city to Gen. Grant; also a copy of a paper which contains an account of the Boston massacre, the correspondence relating to Washington's campaign, both of which he found in a pile of old paper stock. An interesting find was that of a copy of the old Webster's spelling-book-the genuine article. It has come spelling its way along down the aisle of two-thirds of a century to these later days of spelling-books that are fearfully and wonderfully gotten up by wonderfully constituted school committees. Probably this old institution got into the rag-bag by mistake or was conveyed from some antiquarian bookstore. The back of the cover is of coarse linen eloth; the sides are of layers of brown paper, with an outside finish of their blue paper. The leaves of the old book suggested bleached straw and slacked lime, with a bit of sulphur added to give it finish. A peculiar class of book-hunters haunt the large junk-shops in search of rare or odd books and the popular monthly magazines. These genteel chiffonnieres, if they may be called such, occasionally strike valuable finds in old literature which costs them at the rate of 6 cents per pound. Another class of buyers look up the monthly parts of maga zines, and upon completing the sets dispose of them usually to the Cornhill second-hand bookstores. These buyers often tackle a pile of old paper stuff that keeps them busy for a week or longer, and it is often the case that their labor is unrewarded. The law of compensation seems to be a factor in the old junk business, for many get a good living from other people's waste, and some even get rich out of it. Even the old tin cans, which were formerly condemned as useless, and millions of which have been planted in the Back Bay district of Boston, are now utilized, and the metal sheet made from them can be japanned, or tinned, or gal-vanized, or treated in any way that the material from the original ore is treated. Out of the iron are made buttons, shoe lace ends, show cards, telephones, electric lights, and letter-boxes, small ware, etc. There are parties in Boston who make the collection of old tin, tin cuttings, and old tin cans a regular business, and make money out of it. The material is sent to New York, where it is utilized. So the utilization of tinplate cuttings and the recovery of the tin has grown out of the same channel of scientific thought and experiment that long ago took the rags from the dunghill and converted them into sheets of paper. - Boston Herald. Eight Thousand Locomotives.

The Baldwin locomotive works, Philadelphia, have just completed and shipped engine numbered "8,000." The first locomotive built at these works was turned out in December, 1832, and it took twenty years, until November, 1852, to build 500 engines. The second 500 engines were built in eight 'years, No. 1,000 being finished in February, 1860. The next six years saw the third 500 built, No 1,500 leaving the shop July, 1866. The fourth 500 were built in three years, by Oct. 30, 1869; the fifth 500 in two years, and the sixth and seventh 500 each in one year, engine No. 3,500 leaving Nov. 20, 1873. Business then slackened, three years being required to build the next 500, and two years the following 500, engine No. 4,500 leaving Dec. 17, 1878. Then trade improved, 500 engines being built in fifteen months, and 1,000 more engines in twenty-two months, while 500 more engines were finished in ten months, No. 6,500 leaving Dec. 6, 1882, and marking a half a century for the works. The next eight months saw 500 more built, and before the close of 1884 No. 7,500 was turned out. Work has again slackened, and

Experiment in Paying Employes. At an iron factory at Guise, France, an experiment of an interesting character has been made in order to prevent the evils arising from all the workmen being in funds at the same time. The staff is alphabetically divided into four groups, each of which is paid fortnightly; one on Tuesday and one on Friday of one week, the other two on the same days in the following week. The results are said to be satisfactory as regards the prevention of temptation to general excessive drinking, there being about 1,400 hands employed. -Boston Budget.

Multiplication of the Fly. To kill one fly in March is estimated to be as good a work as killing 8,100, 000,000 in August, the increase and multiplication of the fly population being figured as follows: One fly on the 20th of March is represented by 200 on the 24th of April; by 300 times 300, equaling 9,000, on the 28th of May: by 27,000,000 on the 2nd of July, and by 8,100,000,000 on the 8th of August. - Exchange.

A Curious Case. Punctuation has more than once played havoc with human affairs. THE BEEHIVE. NOW ENLARGED!

Our patrons on entering our stores now will not be able to recognize any of the old familiar "landmarks," so well known to them. They have all been swept away by the overwhelming waves of trade that have flowed into our stores, and whose tide knew no fall, but kept on rising and rising until we were compelled to occupy the entire building in order to let it flow in. We are now through with the main alterations in our store, 1 he first floor, Nos. 715, 717, and 719, have all been thrown into one room, with easy stairways and elevator leading to our up-stairs departments. While we are not altogether through, and the conditions of stores at present not as we would wish, we still invite our patrons to call on us, and inspect our new improvements, by which they will be able to do their trading with comfort and despatch. For any inconvenience that our customers have been put to in the past few weeks we kindly 0sk indulgence, as in making our extensive alterations things were, at times, unavoidably, "topsy-turvy," but under the new conditions, we will endeavor to make the right amend for any trouble that we may have saused them.
